Before I get into bed, I always drink a cup of milk because it can help me ____1____ well.

Last night, before I went to sleep, I drank milk as usual. But this time I only drank a half because I just had a big dinner with my friends a few hours ago. Then, in a few minutes, I was asleep. But, about one hour later, I was woken up by some noise. What was it? ____2____ was different, except for (除了) my window—it was a little open. “Oh, it's the wind,” I said. “The wind ____3____ my window open.”

After I closed the window, I went back to bed. But just before I fell asleep, the window began to open again, very slowly. What or who was it? Maybe a ____4____! Then I saw something dark at the window. I sat up quickly, turned on the light and found the “thief” was a cat. Then I got a shoe and ____5____ it to the cat. But before the shoe reached the cat, it had run away.

★ 能力提升D. Answer the questions.

In Britain, some people now like to “go to work on an egg”. That's to say, they just eat an egg for breakfast before going to work. But most British people still like the traditional breakfast—cereal（麦片粥）or toast（烤面包片）with butter（黄油）and jam（果酱）. However, whatever they eat, they always drink a cup of tea or coffee at breakfast. At noon, most British people like to have a small mid-day meal—usually some sandwiches, coffee and fruit. And they usually enjoy their biggest meal of the day in the evening. The evening meal is usually called “tea” or “dinner” in Britain. A traditional British dinner mainly includes meat and some vegetables. The most popular meat is chicken, beef, pork and lamb, while vegetables grown in Britain, like potatoes, carrots, peas, cabbages and onions, are always popular. But today they can also enjoy other vegetables from many countries all over the world. After dinner, they like to eat some dessert—something sweet like chocolate cakes or apple pies.

1. Do most British people like to “go to work on an egg” now?

2. What do British people always drink at breakfast?

3. What does a traditional British dinner mainly include?

4. You can't buy vegetables from other countries in Britain now, can you?

5. Do you like to eat any dessert after dinner? Why or why not?
